Lars Owe Dahlgren is professor of Education at Linköping University. He is also a part-time professor of Medical Education at Karolinska Institutet in Stockholm. His main research interests comprise higher education in general and health care education in particular, qualitative research methods, patient communication and outdoor education. He has currently finished a research project supported by the European Commission comprising students and professional novices in Sweden, Germany, Norway and Poland aiming at describing experiences of higher education as a way of preparing for work life.