Challenging our thinking, challenging our schools

Find out about “The Pit”, a metaphor for thinking about challenge in lessons and change in organizations. Find yourself in the pit and then learn strategies for getting others into the pit. Finally, learn what life in the pit is like and why pits are good for us!

The workshop is based on the findings of a multi-million pound project set up in the UK by James that has developed the thinking skills, motivation and resilience of students, as well as the pedagogy of teachers. Combined with the processes of the Teacher Designed Schools network set up by Dr John Edwards and Bill Martin, these strategies are having a powerful effect on life in schools across the UK and Norway.

For more information about James Nottingham and his company, Sustained Success, please visit: www.sustained-success.com