Robert Swartz is presently the director of the National Center for Teaching Thinking (NCTT) in the USA. He is an emeritus faculty member at the University of Massachusetts at Boston, where he was the founder of the graduate program on Critical and Creative Thinking. He received his B.A. and PhD in Philosophy from Harvard University and studied under a Fulbright Scholarship at Oxford and Cambridge Universities in England. Through NCTT he provides staff-development to educators on topics related to restructuring curriculum and instruction by infusing critical and creative thinking into content instruction. His work has extended across the USA and into Venezuela, New Zealand, Australia, Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaysia, Israel, The United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia, and the United Kingdom. He has also served as an educational consultant to various text-book publishers about infusing thinking skills into content-oriented textbooks, has worked with Departments and Ministries of Education on projects related to working thinking instruction into a curriculum, and has consulted with various educational testing services on assessing skillful thinking.

Dr. Swartz is lead author of a series of lesson design handbooks on Infusing the Teaching of Critical and Creative Thinking into Content Instruction, a series of follow-up Infusion Lesson Books on the same topic, and an overview of teaching thinking, Teaching Thinking: Issues and Approaches, co-authored with David Perkins. He has also authored various articles on teaching and assessing skillful thinking, problem-based learning, the role of thinking in managing our emotions, and developing skills to help us think critically about arguments. He has been featured on public educational TV in the USA demonstrating how critical and creative thinking can be infused into content instruction. His latest work is Thinking-Based Learning, forthcoming in April, 2007, and co-authored by Art Costa, Berry Beyer, Rebecca Reagan, and Bena Kallick. The NCTT offices are in Newton Center, Massachusetts (PO Box 590607, Newton Center, MA 02459, USA; Tel: 617-965-4604; Fax: 617-795-2606; Email: info@nctt.net; Website: www.nctt.net).